Robert Daly (Bob) earned his bachelor's degrees in economics and business administration (Quantitative Methods), and his master's degree in economics at California State University, Fullerton. While working on his master's degree, he began teaching economics at community colleges. He continued teaching throughout his career with appointments at California State University, Fullerton, and the University of California, Irvine (UCI). At UC Irvine he held the title of Lecturer in the Department of Economics.

Bob began his UC career at University of California, Irvine in 1980 as the Director of Information and Planning Analysis. Here, he stayed for 24 years. In June 2004 he was hired as the Assistant Vice Chancellor of Strategic Academic Research and Analysis at University of California, Riverside. Bob retired from UC Riverside 2014.

Since retirement, Bob has been actively involved supporting the UC and his community. He is the President of his homeowner's association, serves on the Ladera Ranch Technology Advisory Committee, was the President of the UC Riverside Retirees' Association for five years, and has been a mediator for the Orange County, California Superior courts. He has been the "webmaster" for the CUCRA for several years and for the past two years he has been CUCRA's Information Officer.

For fun, Bob also provides computer support for many of his family members and friends, has developed a client data base for professional psychologists, plays on two softball teams, plays tennis, goes skiing as often as possible, and travels (when that is again possible) with his wife multiple times per year.
