Discover the rugged splendor of Chile & Argentina ...

Los Glaciares National Park
Located deep in the heart of Argentinean Patagonia, Los Glaciares National Park is a UNESCO World Heritage Site and an area of exceptional natural beauty. The park contains more than 50 large glaciers within its borders, fed by a massive ice cap second only in size to Antarctica. Its centerpiece is the Perito Moreno Glacier, a marvel towering nearly 200 feet above Lake Argentino. Our small group may be lucky enough to witness the glacier “calve”—a truly compelling sight that occurs when a chunk of ice shears off from the glacier, accompanied by a thunderous crack.

Chiloé Island
At low tide, it’s possible to actually walk from the Chilean mainland to the island of Chiloé. But many years of separation from the mainland have fostered a mix of deep, rich traditions that differ from those found in the rest of the country, a unique blend of native Cunco, Chonos, and Mapuche cultures that haven’t changed in many ways. We’ll explore Chiloé and the surrounding islands like the locals do—aboard small boats that allow us an up-close view of the native wildlife, including Humboldt and Magellanic penguins (October to early March). We’ll witness the island’s historic wooden churches, recognized as a UNESCO World Heritage Site, and soak up the slower pace of life in the quaint town of Punihuil, where you’ll find fishermen hauling nets of eels and crabs.

Bariloche & the Patagonia Lakes District
Founded in 1902, Bariloche—a flourishing city (and popular ski destination) with a festive German influence—is the heart of the Patagonia Lakes District. Surrounded by lakes and mountains, you can glimpse the snowcapped Andes above the peaks of shingled alpine rooftops on a chairlift ride high above the tree line, taking in the fresh air and breathtaking view of the green pastures and foothill lakes of Patagonia. We’ll get a ground-level view into the local culture during a visit to a family-run brewery, where we’ll learn how Bariloche’s land and culinary traditions come together and sample beers brewed with locally-grown ingredients.
